

FIELDNOTES - RIVERSIDE COMMUNITY GARDEN
Site visit 1 - morning

Arrived 9:10. Six people present. Two are watering the shared beds near the gate ; they tell me they "take turns, nobody organises it". A retired man (later P02) is repairing the tool-shed door. Newcomers hover at the edge until someone hands them a trowel - the trowel seems to be the invitation.

10:05 - A short disagreement over the shed lock: one volunteer changed it without telling others. Resolved by agreeing to keep a spare key in the kettle hut.

OBSERVED THEMES

- reciprocity (the watering rota that "just happens")
- ownership (who decides about the shed?)
- belonging (the trowel as a welcome)

(Sample fieldnotes generated for demonstration. No real data.)